Individual employees have the choice to telecommute if they are in one or more of the vulnerable populations defined by the CDC, and/or they have existing health concerns (personally or within their household) that makes them vulnerable.

Supervisors, with their employee, will determine if an employee can telecommute based on their job duties. If they can, they will be encouraged to do so. This decision should be documented with the appropriate Cabinet officer and Human Resources, and done in a way that is consistent with collective bargaining agreements.
